BIRD CALENDAR - June 1914.

Bulletin No. 2.

The present season, as gauged by the condition of vegetation on May 17, was from one to two weeks behind the average. Apple trees were then in full bloom on the Heights, while on the plain of Cleveland the same stage had been reached about a week earlier. The migratory birds moved slowly owing to the retarded development of their food-supplies. It was therefore decided to issue but one Bulletin for April and May, and thanks to the zeal of some of our observers, we are able to present the largest list recorded in the past ten years, one hundred and seventeen (117) species of birds having been noted in Cleveland and its neighborhood.

It is very gratifying to find that many rare species that were formerly rare with us are now more commonly reported, and that our native birds are generally increasing in the entire Cleveland district.

Owing to the length of this list, it has been necessary to omit all notices of Behavior and Nesting Activities, but such data are particularly desirable, and are duly preserved.

It is hoped that our friends and correspondents will continue their personal records of Bird-Life throughout the year and we shall be grateful to all who may send us notice of rare or unusual nests, so that detailed notes and photographs may be secured.

For the sake of simplicity, all species that have been noted from January to June, whether migratory or not, are numbered consecutively in the order observed, preference being given to Cleveland or its immediate vicinity.
